

Acknowledgements

This book originated from the idea for a joint venture exhibition and catalogue curated by Galleria Lorenzelli and Galerie Lingenauber in 1993. The "art" of coordinating various contributions and technical circumstances delayed completion of this book for some months. Thanks to the many friends, scholars and colleagues who have offered us their expertise and advice, the project never was in need of life-support. Their generous help and scholarly contributions persuaded us to extend this book to its present size as work progressed.

We wish to express our special gratitude to all scholars who immensely supported our project by supplying us with their expertise and writing one or more entries in the catalogue.

We would like to thank Daniele Benati for his instant help supplying an entry to The Master of Rodolfo Lodi. It is a great pleasure to have found his helping hand.

We are deeply indebted to Ingvar Bergström for all the research he has carried out through his long life. The results of his work he made available to us through many publications and talks. He is a gifted scholar with an open mind whose messages reach beyond academic fields. He shall always have an enthusiastic audience listening to him.

Michael Braun merits our thanks for his entry to Cornelis Norbertus Gijsbrechts, extracted from his doctoral thesis. He came to the gallery to study the picture, despite the demanding effort of a dissertation. Our best wishes accompany him on his academic way.

When we asked Alessandro Brogi to write the entry to Carlo Magini, we knew that we entrusted him with a difficult task which he mastered with the best skills.

In the Tuscan hills north of Florence Martina Brunner Bulst and her family welcomed us with great hospitality. She also unstintingly shared her erudition in the most hospitable manner. We all anxiously await her book.

Who could be more competent to write an entry to a Lombard artist from the sixteenth and seventeenth century than Francesco Frangi? Our special thanks are dedicated to him.

This book would be substantially less without the invaluable contributions by Claus Grimm. He accepted our inquiries at short notice and he was always unfailingly generous with his expertise and advice. His family merits a special gratitude for their help and their patience whenever we called at late hours.

The entry of Stuken set the standard for this book, when Erika S. Költzsch supplied us with it. She was the first scholar submitting an entry, despite her commitment writing a dictionary on still lives at the same time. We are anxiously awaiting her book.

We are indebted to Laura Laureati for her entries regarding the still life paintings of Northern painters in Italy. We appreciate her contribution especially, knowing that she continues her studies on this school with a monograph on Vanvitelli.

Fred Meijer not only wrote many entries but he also responded to one or more chapters in draft. His opinion has become an invaluable asset for our work. Our thanks are dedicated to him for his inestimable support.

Ulrike Middendorf spontaneously agreed to our inquiry and allowed us to participate in her knowledge about still lives. Best known for her monograph on Hendrick Dubbels, she has helped our understanding of symbolic meanings in still life painting with recent publications.

For many years Hana Seifertová has always been available whenever we needed her scholarly opinion. With her great charm she is an ideal host to a visitor coming to Prague. The Flegel exhibition in Frankfurt and Prague, the Narodni Galerie v Praze, and our project benefited equally from her generous support.

Few scholars in this world have dedicated their life to the research of still life painting as much as Sam Segal. His list of publications already fills pages of bibliography and it continues to grow. Sam Segal proved again that his entries are of inestimable importance. Our thanks are dedicated to him and his wife for their warm hospitality and their generous support.

We would like to dedicate our special thanks to Alberto Veca who has substantially and generously contributed in the past and present to the study of still life painting.

When we were still students Gregor Weber already impressed us with his seemingly unlimited knowledge on iconography. His contributions to our knowledge of still life painting is important and it is a pleasure to acknowledge his contribution by the present collaboration. We shall hear and read more of him from Dresden.

We are also deeply indebted to Kurt Wettengl. He immensely enriched our book with his entry to Hendrick van der Borch. His sustained enthusiasm for this project is gratefully acknowledged.

We would like to extend our thanks to the contributors of text and photos, to the advisors, lenders, directors and curators and the following individuals who helped in many different ways to the organization of the exhibition and the preparation of the catalogue. We list them here in dry alphabetical order of place, but each name is associated in our mind with a special memory:

Amsterdam, Rijksmuseum; Antwerp, Museum Mayer van den Bergh; Antwerp, Rockoxhuis; Barnsley, Cannon Hall Museum; Bergamo, Accademia Carrara; Berlin, Bode Museum; Berlin, Kupferstichkabinett; Berlin, Staatliche Museum Preußischer Kulturbesitz; Birmingham, Barker Institute; Bratislava, Slovenská Národná Galéria; Braunschweig, Herzog Anton Ulrich Museum; Bremen, Kunsthalle; Brussels, Musée des Beaux-Arts; Copenhagen, Den kongelige Maleri- og Skultursamling, Statens Museum for Kunst, Copenhagen; Darmstadt, Hessisches Landesmuseum; Delft, Municipal Museum Het Prinsenhof; Dessau, Staatliche Galerie Schloß Georgium; Dessau, Museum Schloß Mosigkau; Dresden, Staatliche Kunstsammlungen; Düsseldorf, Kunstmuseum; Fano, Pinacoteca; Fano, Cassa di Risparmio; Frankfurt, Historisches Museum; Frankfurt, Senckenbergische Bibliothek; Freiburg, Morat Institut; Friedrichshafen, R. Schmitt; Gent, Municipal Museum; Gent, Museum voor Schone Kunsten; Hamburg, Kunsthalle; Hanau, Museum Schloß Philippsruhe; Karlsruhe, Staatliche Kunsthalle; London, British Museum; London, Courtauld Institute; London, National Gallery; London, Victoria & Albert Museum; London, Wallace Collection; Los Angeles, Los Angeles County Museum; Madrid, Museo del Prado; Milan, Biblioteca Ambrosiana; Milan, Pinacoteca Ambrosiana; Milan, Pinacoteca di Brera; Milan, Marco Bona Castellotti; Mönchengladbach, H. Pferdenges; Munich, Alte Pinakothek; New York, Metropolitan Museum of Fine Art; Oxford, Ashmolean Museum; Paris, Dr. Peter Kraljic; Paris, Louvre; Philadelphia, Museum of Fine Art; Prague, Narodni Galerie v Praze; Rotterdam, Museum Boymans van Beuningen; Salzburg, Residenzgalerie; San Francisco, M.H. de Young Memorial Museum; Sarasota, John and Mabel Ringling Museum; Schwerin, Staatliches Museum; Sibiu, Muzeul

Brukenthal; St. Petersburg, Hermitage; Stuttgart, Staatsgalerie; Stuttgart, Werner Sumowski; The Hague, Mauritshuis; The Hague, Rijksbureau voor Kunsthistorische Dokumentatie; Vaduz, Collection of the Prince of Liechtenstein; Vienna, Kunsthistorisches Museum; Warsaw, National Museum of Warsaw; Washington, National Gallery of Art; Washington, Heinz Collection

Many colleagues were tremendously supportive of this project. While impossible to cite them all we are especially obliged to: Amsterdam, Pieter de Boer; Amsterdam, Douwes Fine Art; Amsterdam, John Schlichteborgen; Gent, Jan de Boever Fine Art; London, Colnaghi; London, Johnny van Haeften; London, Peter Mitchell; London, Peter Tillou Fine Arts; London, Rafael Valls; Munich, Julius Böhler; Munich, Oskar Scheidwimmer; New York, Otto Naumann; Paris, Bob Habeldt; Paris, George de Jonkheere; Vienna, S. Lukas Galerie, Roman Herzig

We are greatly indebted to the countless efforts of our friends: Fausto Messaggi, Jill Spoor, Alberto Sangalli, Marta and Tobia Lorenzelli, Marco Fioretti and we express our gratitude to them all.

We would like to extend our thanks to Daphne Alazraki, for her gracious support, suggestions and especially tolerance during the preparation of this book. She took upon herself to proof-read some entries; her vast erudition, matched with her meticulous and judicious criticism, were immeasurably beneficial.

Editing and proof-reading of the entire manuscript was carried out by Anna Buruma with her great care and sensitivity. We owe her the final debt of gratitude for her patience and dedication.

In a time when independent publishing becomes progressively more difficult, it was gratifying to know that we were patiently and unflaggingly supported at all stages of our project by all.

We wish to dedicate this publication to Graziella Lorenzelli and Johanna Lingenauber.